THE MEMORIAL INSCRIPTIONS OF CORNWALL Cofscryvow Kernow

THE PARISH OF TEMPLE

Towl Bedhcryvow Kernow

Numerous plaques, burial ground headstones, foundation stones and formal monuments record the lives or actions of both the famous and successful as well as the ordinary person. By far the most numerous of these will be found in burial grounds, others will be located on War Memorials; inscriptions are inevitably inscribed on foundation stones of public buildings; special plaques may be erected to record an heroic or notable event or birth place; there are prominent monuments to the rich or extraordinary such as the Bassett Monument on Carn Brea or the Lander statue at the top of Lemon Street in Truro; churches and chapels as well as community buildings often have wall plaques. The majority will date from the past three hundred years but some will be very old, such as a few ancient crosses from the seventh/eight centuries recording a chieftain or important person of that time.

Written records such as parish baptism, marriage and death registers, diaries, deeds, court, taxes and voting records and numerous other "paper" records are, in varying degrees of efficiency, preserved and recorded by the County Records Office and museums and transcribed, indexed and published by local historians and societies. However, numerous records of the people of Cornwall may also be found on stone, slate, marble, wood and metal. Some of these (particularly in burial grounds) have been recorded but usually in index form without a full transcript. Maps indicating locations within a burial ground are virtually nonexistent. There are several reasons why many monuments have been destroyed or can no longer be read. The reuse of burial grounds, general tidying up and maintenance or lack of careful maintenance, the closure of hundreds of places of worship are just some types of accidental vandalism. Natural deterioration caused by wind and rain (especially acid rain), the effects of ice and the encroachment of vegetation are all contributing to a continuing loss.

Every care has been taken to ensure the transcriptions are accurate. Many memorials are worn, partly buried or broken and therefore no responsibility can be accepted for any errors.

The Memorials of the Parish of Temple - Background

Situated on high moorlands, six miles from Bodmin, Temple is a small parish of 843 acres with a diminutive church but a remarkable history. The population of the parish has always been tiny, in 1801 only 15 persons were recorded, this did increase to 51 in 1891, probably due to nearby China Clay Works, but has since dropped considerably. The church and parish owes its ancient existence as a place of hospitality for pilgrims and travellers.

The church, dedicated to St Catherine, was founded in the twelfth century when the Knights Templar were given the land in the heart of the moors where they could have a church and commandery free from all interference. Whether this was to establish a resting place for crusaders - a sort of retreat - or to provide hospitality to pilgrims travelling from the West of Briton and Ireland to the continent and thence to Jerusalem is not known. The church was situated on the slopes of a valley, in a sheltered and, despite having a tower, almost hidden situation. There was a small Abbey, the seat of the commandery, probably situated where Abbey Farm now stands, across the valley through which the Warleggan River flows. The Order was suppressed and the property was passed to The Knights Hospitallers at the beginning of the Fourteenth Century who held it until it was confiscated by Henry VIII. In 1340 the establishment consisted of the Preceptor, one brother and two servants as well as a chaplain to serve the church.

The Knights Templar were generally responsible directly to the Pope and as such were exempt from the jurisdiction of the local Bishop. This resulted, according to Hals in the vicar "by ancient right or prescription legally marrys all persons man and woman according to the Canon in the church of England, that applye to them, without Banns or License, who accordingly have their names Entered in the Parish register by the Clarke thereof, or Record, as a marryed couple, which is Good and valid in Lawe, to all intents and purposes whatever." Writer John Norden, visiting in 1584, described it as "a lawless church where manie bad marriages are consummated and where are wonte to be buried such as wrought violent death upon themselves". By the time Tonkin commented on this oddity of being exempt from the bishop's jurisdiction he was able to state "many a bad marriage-bargain is there yearly slubbered up; and grass widows with their fatlings put to lie in and nurse here." In 1752 such marriages were forbidden by statute and Temple could no longer claim to be the English Gretna Green and, with the loss of a lucrative income, the isolated church, with a tiny congregation, had a bleak future.

Polsue (1867) estimated that services in the church ceased between 1774 and 1784 and the church gradually fell into a neglected ruin. Gilbert noted in 1838 "The churchyard is not distinguished from any other inclosure; and the few parishioners resort to neighbouring churches ....." Sir John Maclean (1879) commented "graves could be distinguished in the Churchyard within a recent period, but interments may have taken place there since Divine Service has been discontinued in the church."

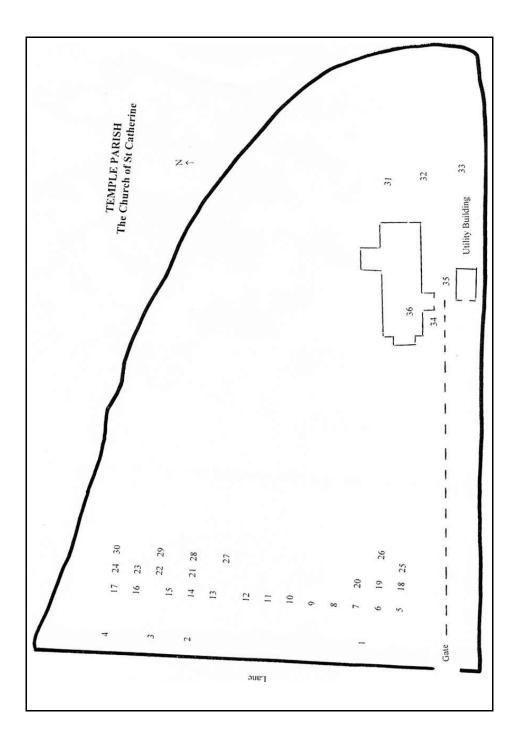

Maclean also reported "A meeting house for Bible Christians has recently been erected near the ruined church. It is calculated to accommodate 100 persons, and there are attached to it eight registered members. It is intended that it shall be vested in trustees to the uses prescribed in model deed of the Bible Christian Society." These nonconformists were providing a facility for the influx of workers into the nearby china clay works. The opening of this nonconformist chapel may have been a reason why, in 1882, the vicar, the Rev, J. R. Brown, resolved to rebuild the church. The ruins were cleared, the desecrated font and other interesting stones were preserved and incorporated into the new building. A large ash tree was growing in the nave of the church - believed to have been sixty years old, within it's roots were found a skeleton in a small vault. During the rebuild the remains of the dead in the churchyard were respected and in no case removed. The church was reopened on 31st May, 1883 and Parish records started. Sadly, but perhaps not surprisingly, all Birth, Death and Marriage Records before that date have vanished, as has every headstone with an inscription. Cornwall Record Office now hold the Marriage and Baptism Records for 1884 to 1960, but no Burial Records. The earliest memorial in the churchyard of this ancient parish is dated 18

On 12th January, 1885 the West Briton reported : "For the first time for at least 150 years an interment was made on Wednesday last in the ancient churchyard of Temple church, near Bodmin. The little church was crowded to excess, the event being an extraordinary one, The deceased, ARTHUR RICH, was an old man in his 86th year, long resident in the village, and it was his express wish that he should be buried in the old churchyard where repose the remains of so many of the Kinights Templars of old. It will be remembered that Temple Church lay in ruins until recently, when it was rebuilt by the exertions of the present incumbent. Fifty years ago the churchyard was a waste place where cattle from the adjoining moor wondered amongst the gravestones and ruins of the ancient abbey church."

The survey by CIP was carried out in May, 2004. Thirty four headstones were found in the churchyard and a note was made of the surviving stones from the ancient church that may have been grave markers. Inside the church the font has been repaired and replaced and has a small memorial attached. The base of the ancient font was found to late to be used correctly but has been placed in the wall above the door in the porch. There are 50 'modern' chairs to seat the congregation and all but one of these carries a little brass plaque paid for by subscribers. The Lectern, designed for the church with a Maltese cross, has a dedication inscribed upon it. The Victorian stained glass windows contain symbolism alluding to the association of the church with the Knight's Templar.

No Protestation Returns (1641) are available for the Parish, however Subsidy Rolls for the same year have been included in the CIP survey as an index reference.

Not far from the church is the Parish War Memorial - it records one parishioner who died for his country and six who served in the First World War.

Latin cross on granite block, inset lettering.

"Mr. Lambert's death, which took place under sad circumstances, will ever be associated with Temple. After officiating at Evensong on Sunday, January 13th, 1901, Mr. Lambert started to walk home to Warleggan. When he had proceeded only a short distance, he was overcome by some sudden seizure, and fell dead. Although he was only about half-a-mile from the church, he was, when he died, on an infrequent path and hidden from the view of the neighbouring houses; and thus his body remained for three days undiscovered. It is worthy of note that during the whole of that time, his dog, an Irish terrier, remained by his master. "Rev. J. H. Dickinson writing in June, 1905.

- 27 Treasured memories of GWENDOLINE VIOLET PAUL, darling wife of ROY, much loved sister and daughter, fell asleep 28th October, 1997, aged 64 years. Always be remembered. Also her husband KENNETH ROY passed away 8th March 2002, aged 73 years. Polished marble upright, inset black lettering.

Granite block surmounted by Maltese cross, granite kerbs, inset lettering.

- In loving memory of ADA, beloved wife of THOMAS WILLS, who died August 28th, 1946, aged 58 years. Life's work well done, life's race well run.
   Granite block, inset letters, kerbs, on a flower pot within kerbs : A beloved wife and mother.
- 31 In loving memory of SAMUEL TREVAINS, who fell asleep in Truro infirmary August 25th 1904, aged 27 years. In the midst of life we are in death. Marble upright, inset lettering.
- 32 Small granite grave marker, no inscription.
- 33 The body of DAVID SHARP 1889 1954, and that of his son WILLIAM GABRIEL 1930 1954, rest here but they themselves are always with God. JOYCE, wife & mother of the above, 1895 - 1976. Granite block, inset letters.

- 34 In memory of Dr. T. G. VAWDREY, born Nov. 15th 1850, died Oct. 28th 1940. Slate slab set in granite block, facing south next to porch.
- 35 Many dressed stones were discovered during the 1883 restoration. Plans of these were made by the Rev, W. Iago, Chaplain of the Asylum, Bodmin. Langdon also recorded each cross which he states were lying against the south wall of the church. The Latin crosses with tapering shafts were probably grave markers, the wheel headed crosses may have been gable ends. One stone is interestingly marked with the patriarchal cross - the Archbishop of Jerusalem was a Patriarch.

INDEX

If a person has more than one surname then there will be two entries in the index. Occasionally this will be because an alias is mentioned, more often there may be a married name and a maiden (given) name. This will aid the researcher who is only aware of one of the names.

If a person appears on more than one memorial there will be a separate entry (and reference number) for each, this means that an individual may appear in the index several times.

If there is no name ( for instance "A Sailor" on an official war grave ) the entry will be in lower case letters. If there is no personal name but the monument has been included in the register as being of interest then it's type will be entered in the surname field but in lower case letters e.g. Ancient Burial Chamber or Church Bell. Nicknames or familiar names appear in brackets.

some cases the age has been computed from dates/years and therefore may not be accurate. If aged under 1 year then this appears as 0.
