The Parish of Grade - Background

The parish of Grade is situated on the Lizard Peninsular and covers 19412 acres. It is divided into four detached portions, surrounded by the parishes of St Keverne, Landewednack, Ruan Minor and Ruan Major. The church (located at Ordnance Survey Grid Ref. 7114) is set amidst fields down a grassed track. This parish, was united with Ruan Minor in 1843 and then the three parishes of Ruan Minor, Ruan Major and Grade were all united in 1934 as Grade-Ruan. The dedication of Grade church is to St Grada and the Holy Cross.

The church, in 1863, had become so dilapidated that all but the 14th century tower was taken down and now, instead of a chancel, nave and two transepts, it only has a chancel and nave. The rebuilt church replaced one of an unusual plan ('was grievously destroyed') peculiar to the Lizard district and the new edifice has been described as 'vulgar'. Fortunately, some of the ancient monuments were preserved. A brass from 1522 now lies on the south side of the alter (Ref. 8), the brass has effigies and arms, of James Errisey, 1522, and Margaret his wife, and to their ten children. There are two marble plaques dating from 1699 and 1722 located in the tower (Refs. 2 & 3), these later two are in need of preservation and the parishioners (August, 2003) are attempting to raise the necessary funds. An old tomb cover is attached to the outside of north east wall (Ref. 70) which provides a fine commentary on the customs of the time.

A sixteenth century version of a legend tells how Sir Roger Wallysborough of Cornwall made a pilgrimage to the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem where he stole a piece of the Holy Cross. On his return his ship was wrecked off Cornwall and he was cast ashore. During his ordeal he vowed to give a piece of the relic to the church of the pariosh where he landed safely. Grade is the only church dedicated to the holy cross on the coast and in 1553 mention is made of a silver box "of the Holy Cross" amongst the parish possessions*.

Within the parish there is a holy Well - St Ruan's Well - and water used in baptism use to be fetch from this well. The "romantic" fishing village of Cadgwith is partly in this parish and partly in Ruan Minor and there is a chapel of ease - St Mary's- in the village.

At the time of the survey in July 2003, 137 memorials in the parish were recorded with 273 names. In keeping with the CIP methodology, the Protestation Returns of 1641 are included as an index reference.

* A document held in the British Museum sets out this legend in a romantic manner. See Harl. M.S.S. 2252.ff50b to 51b.

before chancel step, carefully re-set in Delabole slate. It now lies to the right of the alter in the south east corner of the church and is set in Victorian tiles. The brass represents James Erisey attired in a suit of armour, but bareheaded and his wife in a long gown. Their children - a group of five boys, and a group of five girls, all in choral surplices appear below the inscription. At each of the four corners are shields with shields of the Erisey arms. These are described by Polsue as "Sable, a chevron between three griffins segreant or." Dunkin describes the arms as " a chevron between three escutcheons ..
Each charged with a griffin segreant. The inscription is in the centre of the memorial.
Dunkin ; " James Eryssy was the son of Thomas eryssy, co. Cornwall, and married Margaret, daughter and one of the heirs of John Durant. He was Sheriff of Cornwall in 1512. According to an inquisition he died on October 18, 1522 (not the 17th as stated on the brass), his wife Margaret remaining a widow

 70 Here lies the body of HUGH MASON, gentleman, who departed this life in the fear of God, the third day of December, 1671, and at the age of 65.

Why here ? Why not ? 'Tis all one ground,
 And here none will my dust confound.
 My saviour lay where no one did;
 Why not a member as his head ?
 No quire to sing, no bells to ring ?
 Why, sirs, thus buried was my king !
 I grudge the fashion of this day,
 To fat the church and starve the lay;
 Though nothing now of me be seene,
 I hope my name and bed is greene.

Large slate (9 feet nine inches by 3 feet 5 inches) attached to external north wall of chancel. It was formally located near the north west corner of the church. Carved in low relief. The Cornish had a prejudice against being buried on the north side of the church and it is supposed that this person was the first of the parish so buried, and that he was interred without the usual funeral ceremony. The family arms appear on the memorial : Azure, a fess embattled, between three griffins' heads erased or.

Ere I was it matter not
To thee and what I was thou
Are what I am thou shall be,
Reader let this suffice and ask no
More of me. My tender mother Weep not for me, altho I soon was Gon from thee. Likewise my loving Sister deare I hope with Christ I
